They also saw a vehicle occupied by three subjects who were also trespassing. The two riding dirt bikes were issued written warnings for trespassing. The occupants of the vehicle were issued notices to appear for possession of cannabis and a written warning for a traffic offense.

Environmental Investigator Terrones located an 880-cubic foot pile of wood debris that had been illegally dumped in an empty lot in Jacksonville. Items in the debris revealed that a landscaping company had hired someone to haul away the debris and paid him an additional dump fee to take the items to a landfill. The suspect was interviewed and admitted to the dumping. He agreed to properly dispose of the debris at the landfill and provide disposal receipts. The suspect was charged accordingly.

ALACHUA COUNTY

Officer Reith was patrolling private property during antlerless deer weekend when he came across three vehicles parked in front of a gate which leads to property that has been known for deer hunting. While waiting at the vehicles for the subjects to return, Officer Reith heard two gunshots 10 minutes apart coming from within the property. After approximately 20 minutes, Officer Reith saw two individuals dressed in camo carrying rifles, walking from inside the property. Officer Reith contacted the subjects and asked them if they had killed anything. One subject replied he had killed a doe and the other said he did not kill anything. Officer Reith asked for their hunting licenses. One subject produced a valid one and the other had his license privileges suspended/revoked. Officer Reith asked if there were more people hunting and they replied yes, they were just coming to get a truck to retrieve the deer. Officer Reith followed the subjects onto the property to check the other deer and saw three more subjects all holding rifles dressed in camo standing in front of two dead does and 1 dead antlered buck. Officer McDonald located blood, hair and drag sign on Oleno State Park property across from the suspect's residence. The following day, Officers McDonald and Nichols proceeded to the residence of the suspect, who was sitting in his shooting house on the border of Oleno State Park. He denied killing the deer, but when a photograph of the deer was shown to the suspect, he admitted to killing the deer a few days prior. Officers verified the blood, hair and corn located directly in front of the shooting house on state park property. The subject denied any knowledge of the corn and told the officers the deer was shot on his land and then crossed the fence to die on state property. He admitted to crossing the fence and removing the deer. Charges will be direct filed for hunting on a state park and removing/capturing, killing an animal on state park property. A non-criminal infraction will be issued for illegal entry into a state park.

After a thorough investigation Officer Edson found one man to be in possession of a cooler containing fresh deer meat. He was cited for possession of untagged deer meat.

Officer Pelzel saw an adult male fishing with other people on a pier that is difficult to access. Officer Pelzel waited at an exit point to check the subject's catch. She saw one of the subject's companions exit the area first and, after observing the officer, make a phone call on her cell phone. Officer Pelzel ran toward the location of the pier and saw the subject tossing fish into the bushes. The fish were retrieved, and he was issued a criminal citation for possession of undersized sheepshead.

spotted sea trout, and a notice to appear for possession of five undersized spotted sea trout.

While on patrol Officer Dubose saw a vehicle backed up to a local waterway. After approaching the vehicle, the officer spoke with three individuals who were fishing at the water's edge. A notice to appear was issued for the offenses and the fish were returned to the water.

Officers Delano and Kearney received a call stating people were taking illegal fish near a local causeway. After observing the group for some time, the officers were able to identify the men. The subject was arrested and transported to the Lake County Jail.

PORT CANAVERAL / MERRITT ISLAND REFUGE

Lieutenant Bonds, Officer Eller, and Officer Hallsten were on patrol offshore outside Port Canaveral for the commercial Spanish mackerel season. They were working a detail in coordination with the offshore patrol vessel "Seahawk" in response to numerous complaints from the fishery. Multiple inspections were conducted, but two of the inspections revealed that the captains were not marking their net buoys with the vessels identification numbers. This is an issue because a large net of that size can be illegally fished and if inspected the responsible party cannot be held accountable because there are not any identifiers on the net. This violation was documented and both captains were cited accordingly.

The officers returned to Port Canaveral and began conducting dockside inspections of commercial harvesters as they off-loaded their product at a local fish house. Officer Eller noticed that one of the subjects was attempting to sell 375-pounds of king mackerel and 48-pounds of cobia by using licensing that did not belong to him. Agency databases verified that the subject did not have any of the proper licensing required to sell the fish, nor did the subject have the proper licensing to even possess such high quantities of fish. Further inspection revealed that the vessel was registered to a deceased individual and not registered through the state. The fish were seized, and the subject was cited accordingly.

Officer Caleb Hallsten received intelligence that a subject was illegally possessing a large redfish near the barge canal on the Merritt Island National Wildlife Refuge. He responded to the area and began to search for the subject. Officer Hallsten located the subject and saw him actively fishing. Officer Hallsten contacted the subject and conducted an interview. The large fish was located and measured. The red drum measured over 40-inches which is 13-inches over slot. The fish was returned alive to the water and the subject received a criminal citation for the violation.

Lieutenant Van Trees arrived at the neighborhood and found a pickup truck with dog boxes in the bed of the truck. Lieutenant Van Trees tracked where the men had walked through a yard and hopped a fence into the SWFWMD property. Soon after this discovery, Officer Wilkins and Officer Specialist Phillippi arrived on scene. The three officers set up different points of surveillance. After waiting and hearing the men and their dogs working on the property, the officers confronted the subjects as they were about to come back over the fence. The officers found two men with two hunting dogs and equipment consistent with hog hunting. After interviewing the subjects, both men were cited for entering SWFWMD district lands after hours, entering SWFWMD district lands from an undesignated entrance, hunting in an undesignated area, and dogs not leashed or caged when not part of an approved hunting program or permitted by a special use authorization.

At the jail, the subject provided breath samples of .125 and .123, almost three hours after the time of arrest.

Officer Hardgrove was checking vessels at a boat ramp when he encountered three men returning from a hunting trip on a boat. The men had shot and killed a wild hog. Knowing that most of the land in the area was part of the Charlotte Harbor Preserve State Park, Officer Hardgrove interviewed the men to determine where the hog was killed. The men admitted to shooting the hog on state park property in violation of park rules. Appropriate charges were filed.

A U.S. Coast Guard patrol boat stopped a commercial fishing boat late at night and noticed the two men on board were acting very suspiciously. One of the boarding officers had been through a training course provided by FWC officers focusing on illegal commercial netting operations. The boarding officer noticed a wet monofilament gill net the men were trying to conceal in the back of the boat. The USCG called Officer Stapleton and Officer Perry to the scene.
