Next Steps

Now that the Senate and House have each passed their respective budgets, procedurally they are positioned to hold a budget conference to work out the differences. The Senate passed its versions of the budget bills and sent them to the House. The House amended the Senate bills to contain the substance of the House bills, and sent the amended Senate bills back to the House for concurrence. When the Senate meets again, next week, it will refuse to concur with the House amendments, and the budget conference will be able to begin (to see the differences between the two versions, still refer to the bills linked above, or in the attached chart). Once the differences are resolved, the Senate and House will then take up the agreed-upon conference budget bills and, when passed, will send them to the Governor for final action. After the Governor completes his line item veto list, the State will have its beginning budget for Fiscal Year 2019/20.
